Published weekly by William J. Smith,
editor and publisher.

The recent experience of a man in a neighboring district who was fined $100 for his failure to obtain a warning mobile license has caused some alarm among drivers in the town. The driver's license may be considered a sufficient reason for the fine. The police should accept excuses. The license should be raised for exhibit if occasion should arise.

It is rumored that E. J. Garfield may be offered the U. F. A. nomination in Medicine Hat riding. The results of the recent election in the old Bow River riding, and now made of Garland's supporters are in Medicine Hat, and the former premier has also a strong following within the boundaries of the new Bow River riding. Mr. Garfield, however, will also be sought as a candidate for the Progressive party in Bow River.

The World Economic conference has failed to much satisfaction, too much talk of concessions, too much self-interest. Now the delegates from Canada and the United States will try and work out its own problems. We are back to the same old story. The same old story for weeks ago. Mr. Ordinary Citizen is wondering "what next?"

A RANCHING COUNTRY
Judging by reports coming from the ranching districts of Alberta, cattle culture in Edmonton, the Berry Creek district, north of the Red Deer, and south of the Bow River, is the exodus of farmers this fall and next spring.

The department has received about seventy-five applications from families who ask for transportation to points where they can find work or better where they hope to find new farm lands.

These farmers had another crop failure, and they have decided to move.

After more than twenty years of experimenting, the Berry Creek country has proven unsatisfactory, so grain raising is out. It is so limited that crop failure is the general rule.

Up to two years ago hundreds of farmers left this district for other points in Alberta after a succession of bad crops.

Now fair crop and migration has been stopped, and the farmers have been forced to move.

The provincial government and the banks have given the best of help in moving settlers in Berry Creek districts to other points. They should be congratulated for this year.

These settlers are of good stock, hardy pioneers who have lived through many difficulties and worked unceasingly, and born many hardships. I often hear half a dozen of them speak at a time, and they are without funds, and everything possible should be done to help them get a new home.

It is only suitable for ranches. If properly managed, there can be no doubt of a limited population who could make a good living in the ranching business.

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE TO ADOURS LONDON. July 6—Great powers of the old and new worlds agreed early today to postpone the world economic conference until a more propitious time.

Thus, this historic assemblage, called together in an effort to improve economic conditions throughout the world, admitted itself defeated by a violent collision of monetary policies.

The final decision came in a midnight session of the gold standard nations where it was decided the American stand, as reiterated by the United States, must give way, even after cable and telephone communication with President Roosevelt, who insisted on dollar stability which temporarily at least, were irreconcilable.

The new countries evidently were concerned over their inability to win over Great Britain, which maintained its stand in opposition to other showing with Canada and the other dominions a leading role toward the United States. The result of the meeting from the yellow metal camp left with a loophole for reassembling of the conference.

Russia Releasing British Prisoners. July 6—C. G. Thornton and Wm. MacDonald, British engineers held to ransom by rebels, arrived in London today after their release two days ago, a few weeks after the trial.

WORLD GRAIN SHOW AT REGINA

Presenting a never ending show, a continuous panorama of education and entertainment, Regina's World's Grain, Art, Industrial and Conference exhibition opens Saturday, July 7, and continues until August 6.

The educational and instructional exhibits, including the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference have been the foremost considerations in the organization of the exhibition committee who have conceived and developed the undertaking, but the educational and industrial exhibits have also been given the most careful thought with the result that there will be a continuous series of six days and 14 nights of carnival and gorgeous spectacle.

Among the many attractions to be presented are the "Big Parade," a mammoth revue, a swift, majestic panorama of sunfire and smoke, a grand display of fireworks on miles of things to see, and 10,000 beautiful and interesting exhibits in the 90 acres of land, including the largest collection of greatest artists on the North American continent, and from Europe and America, to give delight to all who attend.

Another treat for music lovers is the spectacular opera "Aida." This will be performed in the grand arena in the world's capital, and is being brought to Regina with the greatest of success. The production will add thrill to a splendid program of platform drama.

Western Canada's greatest live stock exhibits, with entries from all the provinces, will be a feature that will give pleasure to all farmers, as well as the educational exhibition and pleasure of the visitor. These exhibits cover a two mile walk, and the visitor will have a whole day to see them thoroughly. They include a replica of the Prince of Wales' Royal Canadian Mounted Police showing the natural resources of Canada and their location, Manitoba, Alberta, British Columbia, and Saskatchewan, and hundreds of specimens of mounted specimens.

The decorations of the building achieved from grains and grasses, grown in the fields of Western Canada, and the flowers, a huge tented city has been erected for the accommodation of all visitors.

A large hall for the holding of various meetings, speeches, etc., will be available for rent can be examined at the Accommodation Bureau, in the Merchants Bank Building.

AWAKENED WOMAN

ELINORE BARRY

The story so far: Joyce Ashton, poor stenographer, in a skidding taxicab accident in Chicago, suffered loss of memory. Then, when she awoke one morning after a fall from her horse to find herself under the roof of a rich man's house, Mr. Packard, rich California stock packer. Four letters in her desk also indicated that she had been ill during the two year interval, and she had been a heartless,reckless young woman who had been seriously involved in an affair with a man named Malland. She concluded that she had been ill during that time, but she found Malland hard to imagine. His troubles were further compounded by the fact that he was referring to a "baby" it was her.

Shortly after ten o'clock Sam burst into the room from the front door and stowed away her two suitcases.

The bank teller at the bank greeted him with a smile. "Good morning, Mrs. Packard. Say, that was some little tumble you took."

"Oh, I'm all right," replied Joyce hastily. She pushed her check book out, and Sam took it without a word.

Then she sat down, her hands clasped, and almost ran out to the car again, she reflected happily.

When they were well out of town to the west, Joyce said, "Sam, I'm nervous. I feel her nervous fear evaporate under the stimulus of an improbable adventure in a new venture. This was going to be fun, she reflected happily.

They reached San Francisco about noon. Joyce parted from Sam with mingled feelings of relief and regret. She was sorry to leave him at station in the clear little room at the big Y.W.C.A. building she proposed to stay in until she carried out her plan of action.

The days passed rapidly in the meetings Joyce gave for the girls in the吸引 in driving a car. In these drives, much to her surprise, she had little trouble in learning to handle a machine.

She spent the afternoon riding in the golden Gate park. Her mother made gratifying progress, and every day looked forward to her son's greater pleasure.

One day she met some girls in the Y. W. C. cafeteria talking about Chinese restaurants and, her interest aroused, set out to explore these exotic places.

That evening all went there, and she was surprised to find that the restaurant to which she had gone after a day of riding and driving the car.

A man was sitting at the table she had chosen, and she was unconsciously wended around the restaurant to realize a moment later that he had left her book on the table, and she picked it up.

"I say, is this yours?" "Please sit down, I want to speak to you." "I know it's enough, but I have no time to waste." "I am not quite ready to talk to you now, but I will when we are alone." "I am not quite ready to talk to you now, but I will when we are alone."

He was much taller and looked almost as young as the girls she had seen in the room. A splendid physique unmarred with wide shoulders and strong arms. And his face, details of his impressed themselves on Joyce so strongly in the first few moments that she could not bear it, and yet—she was so unlike the Mananita, and the stared at him, her curiosity.

"I'm afraid I'm not altruistic enough to give the book to you," laughed Joyce. "Robert Alansworth is one of my favorite authors, and writing, "Robert Alansworth."

It was inevitable that Joyce should make a greater impression every day, and every day looked forward to her son's greater pleasure.
